) ORDER
)
)
)

19 On March 15, 2013, Defendant, Francisco Manuel Partida-Diaz ("Mr. Partida"), filed a 20 Motion to Withdraw his Guilty Plea ("Motion"). Mr. Partida argues that his guilty plea was not 21 knowing and voluntary and/or he has a fair and just reason to withdraw his guilty plea. The Court
22 has fully considered this matter, including a review of the case file, the Motion filed, the authorities 23 cited therein, and arguments presented. For the reasons stated below, Mr. Partida's Motion to 24 Withdraw his Guilty Plea is DENIED.

25 A. Knowing and Voluntary

26 Mr. Partida argues that his guilty plea was not knowing and voluntary because "he was not 27 advised that he could be facing a significantly enhanced guideline range" due to his 2005
28 conviction for "Throwing a Substance at a Vehicle."

1 A guilty plea is valid “only if done voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently, with sufficient
2 awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences.” Tanner v. McDaniel, 493 F.3d
3 1135, 1146 (9th Cir. 2007) quoting, Bradshaw v. Stumpf, 545 U.S. 175, 183 (2005). A defendant 4 must understand the consequences of his plea including “the range of allowable punishment that 5 will result from his plea.” Tanner, 493 F.3d at 1147, quoting, Littel v. Crawford, 449 F.3d 1075, 6 1080 (9th Cir. 2006). The defendant bears the burden of showing by a preponderance of the 7 evidence that his plea was not knowing and voluntary. United States v. Carroll, 932 F.2d 823, 825
8 (9th Cir. 1991).

9 First, there is no evidence before the court to support Mr. Partida’s assertion that his guilty 10 plea was not knowing and voluntary. There is no affidavit or declaration by Mr. Partida stating this 11 claim. There is only the Motion filed by defense counsel presenting the argument. This is not 12 sufficient to meet Mr. Partida’s burden of proof. Hence, this argument fails.

13 Second, Mr. Partida signed a written plea agreement before entering his guilty plea and 14 participated in a full Rule 11 plea colloquy when his plea was taken. The plea agreement clearly 15 states that the maximum sentence for his offense is 20 years. Plea Agree. Pg 3. The plea 16 agreement also has a full section that acknowledges that Mr. Partida’s guilty plea is knowing and 17 voluntary. Plea Agree. Pg 5. The plea agreement also clearly states that the “sentence cannot be 18 determined until a presentence report has been prepared.” Plea Agree. Pg 6, Ln 11-13. More 19 importantly, the plea agreement states that the defendant understands that the “judge may impose 20 the maximum sentence provided by statute,” and that he is aware that “any estimate of the probable
21 sentence by defense counsel is a prediction, not a promise, and is not binding on the Court.” Plea 22 Agree. Pg 6, Ln 24-27. Finally, the plea agreement states that the parties may argue for any 23 Specific Offense Characteristic at the time of sentencing. Plea Agree. Pg 7, Ln 28. Each of these 24 elements were also covered during the Rule 11 plea colloquy. In short, the written plea agreement
25 that Mr. Partida signed fully explained the consequences of his plea and the “range of allowable 26 punishment” that could result from his plea. Accordingly, the Court finds that Mr. Partida’s guilty 27 plea was knowing and voluntary.

1     B. Fair and Just Reason for Withdrawal

2             Mr. Partida states that his defense attorney did not advise him that his 2005 conviction for 3     “Throwing a Substance at a Vehicle” could merit a +16 as a crime of violence and increase his 4     sentence. Mr. Partida argues that this was inadequate legal advice and hence, is a fair and just 5     reason to withdraw his guilty plea. The Court disagrees.

6             Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11(d)(2)(B), a defendant may withdraw his guilty
7     plea prior to sentencing if he “can show a fair and just reason for requesting the withdrawal.”
8     United States v. McTiernan, 546 F.3d 1160, 1167 (9th Cir. 2008) (citations omitted). The “fair and 9     just” standard is generous and is liberally applied. Id. Erroneous or inadequate legal advice may 10    be a “fair and just” reason for withdrawing a guilty plea. Id. If a defendant shows that his counsel’s 11    “gross mischaracterization” of a possible sentence could plausibly have motivated his decision to 12    plead guilty, this is sufficient to constitute a “fair and just” reason for withdrawing his plea. Id. The 13    defendant bears the burden of showing that he has a “fair and just” reason for withdrawing his 14    guilty plea. Id.

15            First, as stated above, there is no evidence before the Court showing that Mr. Partida has a 16    “fair and just” reason for withdrawing his guilty plea. There is no affidavit or declaration from Mr.
17    Partida, or anyone else, attesting that his counsel gave erroneous or inadequate legal advice. There 18    is only the Motion papers from his counsel making this argument. This is not sufficient evidence 19    to meet Mr. Partida’s burden of proof. Hence, This argument fails.

20            Second, as pointed out above, Mr. Partida signed a written plea agreement. The plea 21    agreement clearly stated that the maximum sentence that Mr. Partida could receive was 20 years 22    in prison. Plea Agree. Pg. 3. The plea agreement also stated that the sentence could not be 23    determined until after a presentence report was prepared. Plea Agree. Pg 6. More importantly, the 24    plea agreement stated that “the judge may impose the maximum sentence provided by statute” and 25    that any estimate by defense counsel “is a prediction, not a promise, and is not binding on the 26    Court.” Id. Hence, Mr. Partida knew that his sentencing exposure was a maximum of 20 years and 27    that any prediction of a sentence by his defense counsel was not binding on the Court. Hence, Mr.
28    Partida’s argument that he “was not aware of the true nature of his potential custody exposure”
